5 ENGLISH

Since the beginning of this school year, the Grade 5 students have shown consistent effort in actively participating in English class.

We started by having them write their English goals for the first quarter, which encouraged them to reflect on the specific skills they wanted to improve. Setting these personal learning goals and becoming more aware of their individual targets has helped spark their motivation and eagerness to do better in class.

Our first unit, “Exploring Wildlife”, focuses on learning about different wild animals and how to compare them using descriptive language. One engaging speaking activity involved students pairing up to talk about their favorite animals using the vocabulary and grammar learned in class.

The students show great enthusiasm during this activity, speaking confidently and encouraging one another. It was wonderful to see them support each other while trying their best to communicate in English.

HOME ECONOMICS

In Home Economics class, the students began with an engaging activity-tasting variety of teas and learning to identify their names, flavors and unique characteristics. This activity not only introduced them to familiar flavors but also helped sharpen their observation and sensory skills, which are essential in cooking.

“It served as a meaningful foundation for their upcoming culinary lessons.”

Following the tea tasting, the students help each other to clean the utensils and materials they used. This clean up task was more than just tidying up - it was an opportunity for them to demonstrate responsibility, cooperation and mutual respect.

It was good to see them taking initiative, helping each other and showing care for the shared tools and spaces. These small acts contribute to building important life skills such as discipline, organization and accountability which will benefit them not only in class but also in everyday life.
