The End of the First Quarter

The first quarter of Grade 7 has now ended. It feels like we just started, and yet a lot has happened already.

For me, it's been great getting to know you all, seeing your personalities and learning about your strengths.

Personality

The things that make you unique.

あなたの個性

This quarter, it's been great to see the effort everyone has put in, each in your own way.

What's really stood out to me, and to the other Grade 7 teachers, is how much more independent and mature you've all become.

I'm really looking forward to seeing you all again after the break, recharged and ready to progress even further in your learning journey.

Looking Forward to the Second Quarter

Get ready, because there's already a lot on the horizon for when you return!

I've read through your feedback, and I'm really keen to bring some changes to our English classes based on what you've said.

We'll be diving into a completely new English Project, and we'll also begin preparing for our upcoming English presentation.

...Homework (If you want)

If you want some extra English practice during your time off:

- Online textbook (english.com/login)
(If you forgot your login let me know)
- Study apps (Duolingo, Kahoot, Prodigy etc.)
- Watch English media (Youtube / Netflix etc.)

The most important part is that you come back well rested though, so don't work too hard!
