Becoming Global Citizens

Last week, we had a great chance to think about our connection to the world when we welcomed three students from One Stone in the United States. Their visit is a great time to again think about what it means to be a "global citizen."

global citizen

A person who feels connected to the world.

Being a global citizen doesn't mean you have to travel far away. It starts with moments like the one we had, playing games, sharing stories and asking questions with people from a different background.

It means being curious and respectful about other cultures and ways of life. It's about wanting to learn from others and, in return, share our own culture, too. These connections help us understand that we are all part of one big world.

During the visit from One Stone, it was great to see everyone finding ways to communicate and showing a friendly and open attitude.

This is the real purpose of learning a language—not just for school, but to connect with another person. I hope this experience helped make the reason for studying English feel more clear!
