The World Cup

This week we have been getting into the World Cup. Honestly I don't usually follow football, but the World Cup is an exception. It's exciting to see the best players from all over the world competing together; and when the skill level is this high even the strongest teams have to fight to stay in.

Last week everyone drew a random team to support. This is something I remember doing back when I was in middle school, so I'm glad to see everyone is enjoying following along! I'm of course hoping England win, but Mr. Okamoto is the football expert and he thinks France will win...

This also ties nicely into our continuing English Project, where the goal is to become global citizens.

Following global events and learning about the different countries involved is a great way to build an international mindset!
